WILHELM G. SOLHEIM II

Several of our older and well-known archaeologists of Southeast Asia and China have died during the past two or three years. This issue, on the "Origin and Expansion of the Austronesians," is dedicated to the memory of Bob Fox and Olov Janse; their obituaries appear in this issue. I have as yet been unable to find authors to write obituaries for Hsia Nai of China and Bernard Groslier of Cambodia, and I would appreciate hearing from volunteers who would undertake this task.

In my previous editorial, I mentioned that changes were underway with the University of Hawaii and with the University of Hawaii Press. The university, as a whole, is developing more of a focus on Asia and the Pacific. The budget situation for journals is improving and you will be seeing following issues of AP coming out more quickly than they have in the past several years. Volume 26, Number 2, will be an index of the first 25 volumes; it is near completion and should follow soon after this issue.
